alleging he was of unsound mind
when he provided for DePauw university to share in the $90,000 estate, opened today with the reading of the depositions of Mrs. Florence M. Robinson, a daughter, who is the plaintiff
in the case.

inson's case. Mrs. Robinson was a favorite daughter of W. E. Mick. He often visited her at her home and at other times called her by telephone, consoling her always in her illness
and asking her to consecrate her life
to God.

In one conversation over the wire
Mr. Mick, according to the deposition of Mrs. Robinson, told her he was walking with Jesus Christ, on one side of him and God on the other. He said he could see God as a physical and material being and locked in arms with himself. He said God was a big man, his face shining with light and clothed in shining garments.

Mirror Built in Home

On another occasion Mick said he said to have ordered a mirror door built in the home of his daughter. While on the way to his daughter's home
one day Mick said he received a message from God, wherein he was instructed to pay for the door.

On other visits to the home of Mrs.
Robinson, Mick quoted scripture "to eat anything she ever heard, according to the depositions of his daughter. When Mick was on a visit to the home of Mrs. Robinson in Chicago he desired a man to take his baggage to the station preparatory to returning to his home in Indianapolis. His daughter asked him if the janitor at the flats in which she lived would do. Mick asked her if he was a Christian and a Methodist. His daughter told him that the janitor
was a Methodist. "He will do," said Mick.

Letters Read and Checks Shown.

Many letters from Mick to his daughter when she was living in Chicago were read. These letters tended to support the main contention that Mick was a religious zealot.
Checks were introduced to show the sums of money Mrs. Robinson received from her father.

Mrs. Robinson was cross-examined by James W. Noel. When Mr. and Mrs. Robinson moved to Indianapolis from Chicago, Mick built his daughter a home in Colle Park, Broad Park. When Mrs. Robinson substituted as cashier in the realty office of W. E. Mick, she noticed several barrels of bracket lamps in his office," she said. She also saw a set of buggy harness and eighteen pairs of opera glasses which he kept in his office. Mick began the realty business in 1866.

Bought Many Thimbles.

At another time Mick went to the New York store, Indianapolis, and bought a large quantity of thimbles,
the witness said. He placed the thim-bles in the safe in his office. When asked if she regarded Mr. Mick to be of unsound mind at the time he purchased the opera glasses and thim-bles, she said in depositions that she thought he was.

Mrs. Robinson said that she could remember her father teaching the children to pray when she was quite young. Mr. Mick held prayer as often as four times a day in the family. In 1879, in Woodruff Place, Mrs. Robinson said she "kept time" on the prayers. "My father prayed for over an hour at one of his morning prayers
after breakfast," she said. "His prayers were always clear and distinct, although he often repeated in his prayers and usually began them in the same language."

Against the Killing of Calves.

A Washington special says:
"Convinced that the high prices of meats could be sharply and effectively reduced through the enactment of a law prohibiting the slaughter of calves, the chamber of commerce announced its intention to appeal to the congress for some legislation. Eminent physicians throughout the country will be asked to testify as to the unwholesomeness of veal as food, and their testimony will be submitted to the congress when the crusade is launched."

"Argentina, the chamber points out, has a law which prohibits the killing of a male beef animal until it is three years old and a female until it has reached six years. Leaders in the movement contend that the slaughter of calves in the United States has not only raised the price of meats, but is threatening the standing as a meat producing country."

Mrs. Preston Breckenridge and children, of Eakley, Okla., are visiting Mrs. Walter Crawford.

MAN, INJURED IN RUNAWAY, BETTER

Walter Huffman Narrowly Misses Barbed Wire Fence When Thrown.

Walter Huffman, a young man who resides south of this city, is recovering from the injuries which he received when his horse ran away between this city and Bainbridge Sunday evening.

The horse became frightened at an auto and dashed into a barbed wire fence. The animal's flesh was badly torn and the buggy, which was being used for the first time, was demolished. Huffman was thrown to the ground but narrowly missed the barbed wire.—Crawfordsville Daily

Meeting of the W. C. T. U.

Miss Dell Miller was hostess Tuesday, for the Flower Mission meeting of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. The house was prettily decorated with roses, palms and lilies. The flowers were afterward sent on missions of love to various homes. The program consisted of music, recitation and short addresses.

Mrs. John conducted the devotions, making beautiful comments on the scripture passages which she read.
Mrs. John cited the 104th Psalm as being unparalleled in all literature
for its nature description.

This was followed by a flower song
by Nellie Gildwell, Mary Manuel, Lucile Gildwell, Blanche Bicknell,
Helen Bicknell, puup uoup upon Helen Pfahler and Sarah Elizabeth Gildwell. The selection was well prepared and equally well received.

Augusta McCoy Underwood of Pasadena, California, then told of some work done by women in California. Mrs. Underwood refuted the statement of the Ladies' Home Journal and other publications, to the effect that women voted for the return of saloons to Los Angeles. The same report has been made about Pasadena, which has never had saloons
but has what is called "table-license," for serving liquor at cafes and restaurants, which has been held there because of the large number of tourists. The liquor men called the election for total prohibition, before the people were expecting to have the issue raised. The election resulted in a very small majority which did not mean the bringing of saloons to Pasadena, but left the situation just as it had been before.
In the ward in which Mrs. Underwood resides, there is a large proportion of women; this ward carried by a large majority for absolute prohibition. It was the business district that the majority for "table-license" was obtained, where there were many who wished the license. Southern California is doing wonderful temperance work. Every town that is a good business town in Southern California is a dry town.

Following Mrs. Underwood's address was a reading by Miss Marguerite Callender. Riley's "Bear Story" probably was never more skillfully rendered than it was on Tuesday afternoon by Miss Callender.

Mrs. Hattie Moore's report of the Flower Mission department was followed by the reading of a tribute, in verse, to Mrs. Moore, sent to the meeting by Miss Bethina Vandament, formerly State Flower Mission Superintendent in the Loyal Temperance Legion. Mrs. Moore herself raises and distributes vast numbers of flowers each year. She devotes much of her time to this work, growing many varieties and caring for them with a hand made skilled by a love for flowers and for the human folk they cheer.

A beautiful vocal selection was given by Miss Kathleen Campbell, as the last number of the regular program. This was followed by a short business session. Mrs. John made a report on the work of the committee on moving picture shows. The ladies of the W. C. T. U. voted their appreciation to Mayor Miller and the town council for the ordinance which they passed for the censorship of the moving pictures.

The meeting was dismissed by prayer by our loyal White Ribboner, Mrs. Elizabeth Masten. The attendance was good; several visitors were present. The hostess, assisted by Mrs. Fred Thomas and Miss Daisy Stauch, served appropriate warm-weather refreshments: ice cream, wafers and lemonade.

Surprise Dinner for George Hurst.

On Sunday, June 8th, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Hurst, three miles south of Cloverdale, was given a surprise dinner for Mr. Hurst, it being his 22nd birthday anniversary.
At noon a large table was spread with an abundance of good things to eat. Those present to partake of the bountiful food were Mr. and Mrs. A.
E. Hurst, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Smith,
Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Hurst, Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Hill and son Eldon, Mr.
and Mrs. Harry Hill of Coatesville,
Mr. and Mrs. John Kellar and son
Gene, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Ellis, Mr.
and Mrs. Lawrence McCamack and daughter Mingle, Mr. and Mrs. Allee Cooper and children, Mrs. William Raikes, Bonnie Alexander and children, Elma Alexander, Albert Cooper,
Mrs. Maranda McCamack, Mrs.
Scott Gardner and daughter Amy O-
Ladoga, Arthur McCamack, Otha
McCamack and Andy McCamack and children. All departed at about 4 o'clock wishing Mr. Hurst many more birthdays.

SUNDAY GETS $10,835 FOR 6,458 CONVERSIONS

Baseball Evangelist Completes Revival—35,000 People Attend During the Day on Sunday.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., June 17.—
Billy Sunday, the baseball evangelist, closed his seven weeks' campaign in South Bend Sunday night, with a record of 6,458 conversions
for which South Bend people paid him $10,385. More than 35,000 persons heard the three sermons preached Sunday although it was the hottest day of the year.

Crowds began gathering at the Tabernacle before sunrise and several hours before the opening service at 10 o'clock, the large auditorium was packed, while several thousand more stood in the streets neely, unable to gain admission.

The record attendance was registered at the evening meeting when nearly 15,000 persons heard the evangelist's farewell. In the seven weeks the total attendance was 575, 600, and the revivalist preached eighty-four sermons. He was brought to South Bend under the auspices of the Ministerial association, representing the Protestant churches of South Bend and Mishawaka.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT SOUTH OF TOWN

Struck by an auto driven by Miss Florence Foster, which skidded in some loose stone, the buggy driven by Miss Hattie Evans, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. Evans, was torn loose from the horse and turned over, throwing its three occupants into the road. None were injured, however. The accident occurred late Monday afternoon on the Bloomington pike, south of town.

Miss Evans, age 16, her little brother, John, age 8, and a neighbor child, had driven to the Evans homestead south of town to take their grandmother home. They were returning and had reached the newly built road just south of town when they met Miss Foster, who with Mrs.
Dorsett, were driving to Cloverdale.

The Evans girl pulled to the side of the road and stopped her horse.
Miss Foster attempted to turn to the side to pass but her machine refused to leave the ruts in the fresh stone and before she could stop the car it struck the buggy.

When the machine struck the rig
it turned it over, tearing the harness loose from the horse and throwing the children into the road. None were hurt, however. Will Peck, who happened to be driving along the road, saw the accident and went to the assistance of the women. He got the buggy straightened out and borrowing some harness from his mother, who lives near the scene of the accident, sent the children on home.

O. Evans stated today that the damage to his rig and harness would amount to not more than $5. He realizes that the accident was unavoidable and that it resulted luckily for all concerned.

It has been announced by the Van-

though the site has been purchased.
The company declares the enormous built soon.

Coal Bluff Loses to Lena

Lena won from Coal Bluff June 15 at the latter place by timely hitting by the score of 9 to 8. Sillery was hit hard but fast fielding, with the aid of a brisk wind which blew the ball back, saved him. Thomas, Engle and Parsons hit for triples for Lena and a high jump by Huffman in center robbed Mayo of a home run. Clark was hit freely but he pitched steady in pinches, fanning three out of four

Runaway Horse Struck Snag.

LADOGA, Ind., June 17.—A horse owned by the Andrew Cross livery barn at Roachdale and driven by two young men from Bainbridge, became frightened at about 10:30 o'clock on Sunday evening, ran into a telephone pole and completely demolished the luggy. The young men had stopped at the town well on Main street to water the horse and had taken off the bridle when another rig came up quite suddenly and the horse became frightened and ran west on Main street. One of the boys was in the luggy and jumped, luckily escaping injury, and the horse ran on till it reached the telephone pole in front of the home of Dr. S. R. Peacock when it ran into the obstruction and tore loose from the buggy wrecking it completely. The horse could not be caught and it is probable it wend
ed its way back to Roachdale.

MANAGER PONGO GRABS

PATTERSON OF DePAUW

Manager Pongo Cantillon has signed pitcher Raymond Patterson, DePauw college star, for a tryout with the Millers. Patterson came to Indianapolis from his home in Nobleville and reported at the Millers'
camp today.

Patterson is the hurler that put DePauw on the baseball map this year, his box work enabling the Methodists to lay claim to the state secondary championship. He showed a steady head and remarkable endurance in his college games. Charley Carr is said to have been after Patterson to join the Blues, but the youngster liked the Miller offer best.
He will not be able to pitch for several days, owing to an injury to his hand, sustained just before leaving college.

By the acquisition of Patterson
the Millers have two hurlers with the same name, the veteran Roy Patterson being one of the club's principal breadwinners.—The Indianapolis

SHAM ABYSSINIANS HOAX ADMIRAL MAY

Jokers Made Up as Princes and Party Receive Royal Honors on Flagship Dreadnought

WERE MET BY OFFICIAL BARGE

Guard of Honor Turned Out and Band Plays Anthem—One of the Masqueraders a Woman—British Public Greatly Amused.

LONDON.—The British public, and more especially naval circles, are very much amused over an amazing hoax perpetrated on Admiral Sir William May, Commander in Chief of the Home Fleet, and the officers of the flagship Dreadnought at Portland by a young woman and five young men.

After the woman and three of the men had stained their faces, necks, and hands, disguised their features with Oriental looking beards, and attired themselves in silk brocade robes with costly jeweled turbans to match, the party left Paddington in a special saloon carriage on the Great Western Railroad for Portland. They represented themselves to be Prince Sanganya, Prince Mandok, Prince Makalen, and Prince Mikael Golen, respectively, of Abyssinia; George Kauffmann, their German Interpreter, and Herbert Cholmondeley, Foreign Office attaché. To carry out the idea properly the "Abyssinians" wore patent leather shoes with turned up toes, which are worn only by Eastern potentates, and white kid gloves with heavy gold finger rings worn outside.

Prince Makalen, as chief of the pseudo royal party, wore the real Order of the Imperial Star of Ethiopia attached to his breast by a red, gold, and blue ribbon, and between them they wore $3,000 worth of Oriental jewelry. Their knowledge of the Abyssinian language was practically nil, and each member of the party relied off any gibberish that came into his or her head. To express approbation of the arrangements made for their comfort by the railroad people the Princes muttered in their beards "Bungay Bungay," at which the uniformed inspectors kowtowed to the ground.

The make-up of the interpreter was a work of art. He was supposed to be tanned by the Abyssinian sun. He had faded fair hair, wore huge goggles, and responded "Yes, vat is eet?" to any inquiries put by persons who wished to address his party.

That afternoon Admiral May received a dispatch signed "Hardinge, Permanent Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs," stating that Prince Makalen of Abyssinia and suite would visit the Dreadnought that day. When the party reached the jetty they were met by a Flag Lieutenant with the Admiral's barge, which conveyed them to the battleship Dreadnought, where the Princes were greeted with a guard of honor at the gangway, with the band playing the national anthem of Zanzibar, as they did not have the Abyssinian anthem on board.

Cholmondeley went up the gangway first, and introduced the sham Princess to Admiral May on the quarterdeck, and afterward to his flag officers. Prince Makalen inspected the guard of honor, and then the party was conducted around the ship to inspect the guns, which were explained by the bogus interpreter. Chatting in the wardroom with the officers, Cholmondeley gave a history of the Princes which would have done credit to Baron Munchausen in its sublime mendacity. The Princes refused to take tea because they were afraid to moisten their lips, and a flag officer accompanied them again as far as the jetty. While going slowly down the gangway, to the music of the marine band, one of the Princes tripped on his pointed Oriental shoes and nearly fell into the sea, but the officer caught him in time, and Prince Makalen said that he would send him the Imperial Order of Ethiopia for his presence of mind.

Cholmondeley and Kauffmann, as they called themselves, were the leading spirits in the famous Sultan of Zanzibar hoax at Cambridge five years ago, and the young woman in the case is the latter's sister. Admiral May has taken the Dreadnought to sea for a cruise until the affair blows over. In the meantime, the Admiralty is being inundated with letters from all parts of England suggesting that the name of the battleship be changed to "Black Prince." The identities of the jokers are known to their friends, but have not been made public.

How Mr. Tabtale's Wish Came True

"Please what?" grumbled Mr. Tabtale. "I'm not doing anything, am I?" "Mr. Tabtale! Please!" "Mr. Tabtale! Please! I want you to put the piece of mistletoe back in your pocket and keep it there!" Whereupon, with a certain sheepish, hangdog air, Mr. Tabtale did as he was bid and turned sulkily the very next moment.

"How the wind blows outside!" she cried.

Mr. Tabtale sat tight but glowered hellishly at the blowing wind.

"Listen!" she cried. "He couldn't very well refuse this simple command, but he looked as if he would if he could."

"It's whistling down the chimney!" she laughed. "Oh, I love to hear it whistle down the chimney! Don't you? Shall I put another piece of wood on the fire, Mr. Tabtale? Oh, I love to see it blaze! Don't you-u-u-u?"

"I like all the good old Christmas customs," mumbled Mr. Tabtale.

"Oh, so do I!" she exclaimed. "Mince pie and plum pudding and brandy sauce—and—Mr. Tabtale! Please!"

"Please what?" demanded Mr. Tabtale. "Please what?"

"What is that in your hand?"

"Nothing."

"Let me see, then."

He showed her that exceedingly portable piece of commodity with a spiteful sort of eagerness, immediately thereafter laughing shortly and bitterly like a man who is draining the dregs in his cup.

"How blue the fire burns!" she cried. "One would think that one had sprinkled salt on it."

"Perhaps one has," uttered Mr. Tabtale frantically.

"Oh, Mr. Tabtale! Please!"

"How now?" exclaimed that harassed young gentleman, badgered almost to a degree. "I've got nothing in my hands! Lawd! Funny if I—"

"No, no, I don't mean that," she gently protested, "I mean the salt."

"What salt?"

"On the fire, you know."

"Awful bad luck!" she cried. "Almost as bad as spilling it—though, of course, it one spills it accidentally and throws a pinch over one's left shoulder—"

"Do you really believe in all that?"

"Why, of course I do. Don't you-u-u-u?"

"Certainly not!"

"And don't you believe in cracked mirrors?"

"Nonsense!"

"Nor in crickets?"

"Nonsense!"

"And don't you believe in dogs howling at the moon, Mr. Tabtale?"

"I wouldn't believe them under oath!" he cried, and she laughed so immoderately at his wit that his iron will softened and he looked almost genial again.

"Wait!" she cried. "I've got something for you."

She ran out of the room and ran back bearing a wishbone.

"I saved this from the Christmas dinner," she exclaimed. "I saved it special for you, Mr. Tabtale. Now we each make a wish and pull, and the one who breaks off the largest piece has his wish fulfilled."

"I don't believe it for a minute," grumbled the contumacious Mr. Tabtale.

"Oh, but it's true!" she cried. "The wish always comes true! Always!"

"Not it!"

"Really and truly it does! Oh, really and truly, Mr. Tabtale! Now pull!"

They pulled, the bone cracked, and broke and the larger piece had undoubtedly broken off in Mr. Tabtale's hand.

"There!" she cried with rounded eyes. "Now you'll get your wish!"

He sheepishly drew forth his bit of mistletoe.

"Oh, Mr. Tabtale! Please!" she cried.

"Why?" he demanded with heat. "Isn't this part of my wish?"

"Oh, no!" she implored, "you mustn't!"

He put the mistletoe back in his pocket exclaiming triumphantly: "I knew it!"

"Knew what?" she asked.

"Silly superstition!" he exclaimed in the sourest irony. "Oh, of course I'll get my wish! Oh, of course!"

They sat in silence for a minute, he mutely gloating on his victory, and she pensive and thoughtful.

"How many berries did it have on it?" she breathed at last.

He took it from his pocket for the third time and as he began counting the berries she knelt down to put another bit of wood on the fire. She was a long time in getting that bit of wood exactly according to her wishes, but just before she got up Mr. Tabtale saw a light and he slipped the bit of mistletoe in her pompadour.

"Did you count?" she began as she arose to her feet and some what inconclusively she ended, "Why Mr. Tabtale! What on earth do you mean?"

"Call me Tommy!" he said. "Wished for it!"

"Didn't I tell you?" she cried. "Oh, it always comes true! Didn't I—why, Tommy?"

"I wished for a husband!" said No. 3.

Tommy, unexpectedly, starting on "Dear!" she murmured, as they started fairly together on No. 4.

CORSET WEARERS SQUEEZED TIGHTER

Garment or Near-Garment or Strait-jacket or Whatever It Is Will Not Have Laces Free

STOPPING CUSTOM CAUSES ROW

Women Argue That You Would not Buy a Pair of Shoes Without the Laces and They are a Part of the Corset.

Philadelphia.—"Is a corset without laces a complete garment?" is a question the solving of which has caused a bitter controversy between wholesale and retail dry goods merchants and the Corset Manufacturers' Association.

The manufacturers contend that it is.

The wholesalers and retailers say that it is not.

Women customers declare that the contention is absurd.

Their husbands wish that such were the case.

And so the contention runs merrily on. It originated with the stopping of the supply of laces with corsets by the manufacturer when the following resolution was adopted by the Corset Manufacturers' Association:

"Resolved, That the use of corset laces in the boxing of corsets be discontinued by all members of the association, and they be not furnished gratis or sold below cost to any merchant, except that in cases where because of the peculiar construction of the corset lacing must of necessity be an integral part of the corset, such laces may be permitted."

When this was received by the corset distributors a storm of protest arose and the manufacturers were inundated with letters voicing the indignation of the retailers.

"You would not buy a pair of shoes without the laces. They are an integral part of the shoe. It is the same with corsets. No woman will buy a corset unless the laces are furnished," wrote one of the retailers.

The manufacturers retorted in kind. If a man bought a shirt, they said, he did not expect collar buttons, a collar and a necktie to go with it, although the garment was not complete without these accessories. Also, that when he bought a pipe he did not expect the tobaccoist to fill it with tobacco.

Women had got into the habit of expecting too much, they contended, and it was time to call a halt. With the introduction of the new style corset ten yards of lacing is required whereas with the former models three yards was sufficient to confine the most corpulent figure. This increase in the length of the lacing meant an additional outlay of from $3.00 to $5.00 by each manufacturer.

At a meeting of the association when the matter was discussed it was decided to drop the lace altogether, and incidentally a saving of $300,000 a year was made by the corset manufacturers of this city.

"We used to furnish a cheap lace costing fifty cents a gross," said George C. Batcheller, "but with the advent of the new straight front corset it became necessary to supply a linen lace 10 yards long. The cost of this would make profit impossible on the cheaper grades of corsets. In the end the women who buy get the benefit because they buy a good quality lace and are not in constant fear of having their corset lacing break."

"We cannot afford to restore the laces without increasing the price of the garment."

It is upon the women that the retailers place their chief reliance to win the fight for the restoration of the laces.

COERCION IS HUBBY'S RIGHT.

Therefore He's to Blame if Wife Over-speeds Auto, Says Court.

Boston.—Although his wife, Marie Stanley, was driving, William J. Stanley of Boston and New York, who was in her auto as it sped at thirty-five miles an hour, was fined $20 in the Chelsea District Court by Judge Bosson.

Mrs. Stanley, on the witness-stand admitted the car was going fast, but the Judge ordered her case dismissed.

"The presence of the husband in the car," he said, "renders his wife subject to his control and coercion, so that I accept the plea of Mrs. Stanley and impose the fine on Mr. Stanley."

BACTERIA BUTTER NOW.

Old and Inferior Brands Are Made to Equal the Fresh Product.

Middletown, Conn.—Bacteria that will turn old and inferior brands of butter into a product which tastes like the finest of June butter is the discovery of Professor H. W. Conn, of the bacteriology department at Wesleyan University, announces.

This will help dairymen, as the product will be healthful and extremely desirable. When Professor Conn announced several years ago that he had discovered bacteria that would improve butter, farmers laughed at him, but now all are using the bacteria.

OFFERS TO SELL HIS CHILDREN.

Rev. Thomas G. Boord's Congregation Refuse to Call It a Joke.

Pittsburg, Pa.—The Rev. Thomas G. Boord, pastor of the Wylie Avenue Baptist Church, met a hostile congregation when he appeared in the pulpit recently. The story of his apparent effort to sell two of his children at auction in Circleville had reached here and caused many of the members of his congregation to refuse to listen to his explanation that he was only joking and that he meant to illustrate a point by the fake auction sale. Whether this was true or not, he did advertise two of his five children for sale and did take them to a spot at Main and Third streets, Circleville, at the time announced and ask for bids. He was greeted by 1,000 persons, who almost mobbed him and compelled him to make for home, still clinging to his children.

Boord passed circulars around through Circleville announcing the auction. He pointed out that he was not able to provide for five children and wanted to sell two of the youngsters at auction that he might have money with which to care for the others. The circular which Boord passed around said in part:

"Auction to-night. The undersigned will sell at public auction his two children, as hereinafter described:

"One boy, 7 years old, fair complexion, weighs forty-five pounds. Strong of body and mind. Has never been to school, but would make a competent newsboy and be able to earn good wages in three years. Will be great support to buyer in less than eight years.

"One girl, aged 10 years, dark complexion, weighs fifty-three pounds. Has had four years' schooling. Was youngest pupil in her class. Can execute any household duties, such as plain sewing, cooking, dishwashing, etc. For a child's nurse cannot be excelled. Will be competent to keep an ordinary house in six years' time."

School Bars Chinaman's Daughter.

Macon, Ga.—May Ling Soong, a young Chinese girl, has been barred from the Gresham High School here, a county institution, because she is not of the Caucasian race. She is a niece of Bing Chun Wan, who is connected with the Chinese Embassy at Washington, D. C. Miss Soong came to Macon to enter Wesleyan College, but was found deficient in some of her studies, and it was suggested that she enter the Gresham High School to prepare. The law creating the Bibb County Board of Education requires that all students of the Gresham High School must be of the Caucasian race.

SHERLOCK HOLMES GETS CHECK.

Places Paper in Place from Which It Had Been Blown.

Washington, N. J.—After an eight-hour search for a lost pay check had proved vain, Whitfield Garey, a conductor, hit on a simple expedient of sending another bit of paper after it and thus was able to find it without further trouble. The check had blown out of the window into a patch of tall weeds, and the second piece of paper, as near the size and weight of the check as possible, was laid in the same place, picked up by the breeze and deposited beside the missing pay check.

Wearied with the fruitless quest for the check, Garey sat down to rest, when he noticed the gusty wind which blew all day had not abated a bit nor changed its direction. He reasoned the same wind with a bit of paper just like the one that had disappeared would blow it to the same place. He tried it and was rewarded almost instantly by seeing it flit out of the window and settle slowly to the ground. He went to where it had been lost in the weeds and close beside it lay the check.

RATS BLAMED FOR CHOLERA.

European Epidemic, Now Abating, Originated in Odessa.

Washington, D. C.—Reports from Russia, Italy and Germany to the Public Health and Marine Hospital Service indicated that the epidemic of cholera is abating.

Officers of the foreign corps report they have no doubt the present epidemic originated in Odessa and that rats were the cause. Nearly every case they have discovered in the Russian city was that of a person who lived or worked on the ground floor of a building infested by rats.

From Russia the officers trailed the plague into Italy. A party of Russian gypsies fleeing from the police carried it there and started the epidemic when they used the vessels at a public well for washing clothing. The infection quickly spread.

Every quarantine official in the United States is on the alert to prevent a case of cholera from being brought into this country.

Indian Skeleton Found. Stamford, Conn.—The skeleton of a man, believed to be the Sagamore chief Wascussee, who once reigned over that part of Stamford known as Shippan Point, was found by laborers who were excavating at the point. The skeleton was in a sitting posture. Pottery, a tomahawk and pieces of a pipe also were found.

SHENTON'S DILEMMA

BY BEVERLY KENT.

There was a pile of letters on Mr. Horace Shenton's breakfast-table when that gentleman entered the room at nine o'clock one winter's morning, and, adjusting his glasses, he began to read them.

They were mostly of a business nature. It was some time before he reached the last letter, and he gave a short gasp of surprise and suppressed joy as he glanced at the superscription.

"From Bob," he murmured, pushing back his chair from the table with more comfort. "From my boy Bob! I wonder what he has to say? It's close on two years now since we quarrelled—and oh!—how lonely my life has been since then!"

Lost in a pleasant reverie, he almost jumped out of his chair, when a gentle voice greeted him from the threshold of the room. A young lady in walking attire was standing there timidly.

"Ethel! Bless my life, child, what a start you've given me! And how early you are out and abroad!" Mr. Shenton cried, rising hurriedly to greet her. "But I forgot! You have only just returned, and like a dutiful young lady, you've come round as soon as possible to visit your poor old guardian. I'm glad you've come, glad that you are the first to hear the news. Robert is to be home this evening. The dear boy has written such a nice letter, and—egad, it's made me happy."

Ethel Carbery had been gazing shyly and nervously at Mr. Shenton, but her face took on a brighter look as he spoke. She advanced to meet him, placed her small hand in his, and looked into the face which was so strangely transformed.

"I want to tell you something," she began tremulously. "And I do hope you'll be kind and patient with me. You're my guardian, and you've always been good to me, and—and there's someone who loves me very much."

"Oh? What?" Mr. Shenton cried, and now he was wonderfully alert. "Excuse me, my dear, but I'm afraid wasn't paying particular attention to what you said. Did I hear—or did you say—"

"Oh, you will listen to me!" Ethel went on rapidly, now that she had taken the plunge, as with hands tightly clasped, she spoke hurriedly and pleadingly. "He loves me for myself. I know he does, for he can't guess that I have any money of my own. And he's awfully nice, so own. And he's awfully nice, so own."

"His name is Claude Milverton, and he's not a bit like the rest!" Ethel went on feverishly. "He!"

"Not a bit like the rest!" "No; not a little bit!" He says there are plenty of people—lots of them—in the profession who—"In the profession?" he repeated slowly. "Pray, Ethel, to what profession does this young man belong?"

"He's an actor!" Ethel gasped, her heart sinking as she saw the change in her guardian's expression.

Dinner was over and Horace Shenton and his son were sitting together gazing into the glowing fire.

Mr. Shenton sighed. "It's a curious thing how joy is always mingled with sadness, Bob," he said reflectively. "Your letter this morning made this a red-letter day for me, and to-day has also brought a great deal of sadness to another, and she's fretting at this moment, I'm afraid. A young lady, Bob! A dear, nice girl, whose father died eighteen months ago leaving her to my charge."

"And what has happened?" "She has fallen in love, and I can't approve of the match."

"I wish I could, but that's impossible," he continued dolefully. "She's gone clean against her father's wishes and my principles. What do you think?" and he lowered his voice. "She's fallen in love with an actor, Bob—a worthless fellow and—"

Bob Shenton gazed down at his father quickly.

"An idle, worthless fellow! She's given her heart to a chap like that!" he cried. "Poor girl! But what's his name? And do you know for certain that he's idle or worthless? Perhaps—"

The door yawned open. Ethel Carbery was standing on the threshold. Mr. Shenton turned round and gazed nervously; a great surprise came into his eyes. Ethel advanced quickly.

"Oh, Mr. Shenton, I've come to plead with you again!" she cried. "I've—She stopped and then gave a gasp of joy."

"Claude!" she gasped, and to Mr. Shenton's amazement she rushed to Bob, and flung her arms around his neck.

Mr. Shenton stumbled to his feet. "Bless my life! That's my son Bob!" he stammered.

"And also Claude Milverton, a rising star in the theatrical world," Bob laughed proudly. "Ethel, dear, isn't this quite wonderful?"

Mr. Shenton rubbed his forehead. "I should just think it is," he muttered. "So it's Bob who is your lover Ethel! And he's an actor! An Ethel! And you can't oppose this marriage!"

"No, I can't," Mr. Shenton said.

A FEAT IN IDENTIFICATION.

Body of Man Found in Hudson Discovered to Be That of Soldier. Washington, D. C.—Feats in identification are of frequent occurrence in Adjt.-Gen. Almsworth's office. A body was found recently in the Hackensack River off Hackensack. It had been in the water for many days, and identification seemed impossible.

A bit of underclothing, all that remained on the body, somewhat resembled that worn by privates in the army, and a New York detective came to the War Department with a photograph of the body. But this was useless for identification. The adjutant-general sent for an impression of the dead man's fingers, but it proved unsatisfactory because the local health officers had picked the body so that the skin of the hands and fingers had been greatly contracted and wrinkled. But the surgeon at Fort Jay went to the morgue and injected in each finger and thumb a fluid which made them return to their original form, so that a good record could be taken.

The fingerprints were sent to Washington, and in ten minutes the dead man was identified as a corporal who had disappeared some time before Fort Slocum. The parents were notified and the body was given a decent burial instead of being interred in Potter's field. Moreover, the detectives obtained clues which may assist them materially in the search for the murderer, for murder it was, as the man had a bullet hole through his forehead.

Horse Was a Savings Bank.

Pateron, N. J.—Jim, a big bay horse of the fire department, has been a dime savings bank for three years, but the fact was not discovered until Dr. Pierce, the city veterinarian, was called to look at a swelling in the animal's left shoulder. The doctor declared it wasn't a carbuncle, and the horse had met with no recent injury. As the horse was in pain he opened the swelling and a dime that had been imbedded more than an inch in the horse's flesh dropped to the floor. The firemen recalled that Jim slipped on the asphalt pavement on Main street in going to a fire three years ago and was dragged along his shoulder for two hundred feet. They are convinced that Jim picked up the dime at that time.

DEEDED ESTATE TO CHRIST.

Consideration, Love and a Cent Found on Premises.

Worcester, Mass.—Transferring the title to real estate in Asburnham valued at nearly $50,000 to the Lord Jesus, and appointing himself trustee of the property, the late Charles Hastings, a wealthy resident of the town, made one of the oddest deeds ever recorded in Massachusetts.

The instrument, drawn more than a quarter of a century ago, deeded a garden and several buildings, erected 130 years ago, to the Lord Jesus, with the explanation that he is the rightful owner of all lands, according to the first book of laws, the Bible. The deed was given, according to the records of the registry, in consideration of the love and good will of the Lord and one cent found on the premises.

In making the deed Hastings interposed conditions giving himself the right to occupy the place for life, to improve and repair it and to pay taxes and insurance on it during his occupancy of the same.

DECAY OF POLITENESS.

French Critic Deplores "Copying Faults of the English."

Paris, France.—M. Andre de Fouquieres, who is called the last of the Paris dandies, declares in an article in the Matin, that the French people are losing their reputation as the politest people on earth.

"We are copying the faults of our friends across the Channel," he says, "and we are copying them badly. Brummell, the dandy, who went out of his way to be rude, is the model today. Our young 'elegants' will barely be at the pains to notice the guests with whom they have to dine, thinking that is the English fashion."

"They are wrong. A modern Englishman, though he feels truly sorry for any one who is not lucky enough to be born in the British Empire, is always perfectly courteous."

M. de Fouquieres is also of the opinion that no quality is more useful to a democracy than politeness.

TEN BULLETS IN HEAD; LIVES.

Negro Also Slashed Throat Three Times in Attempt to Die.

Hartford, Conn.—After Robert Sturgis, a negro farmhand, twenty-seven years old, of Deep River, had emptied seven bullets into his skull, had refilled the gun and sent three more after them, he threw the revolver away in disgust and attempted to record a successful suicide by slashing his throat with a razor three times.

Even then he failed to end his life, and when he had been brought forty miles to a hospital in this city the amazed physicians announced that barring possible blood poisoning Sturgis would probably recover. The razor cuts were not deep, as he did not have strength enough to hold the razor at the proper angle.

KEEP SCISSORS IN CASE.

Design for Ornamental and Useful Contrivance.

Good scissors should always be kept in a case, and as many of them are sold without cases, such a little ornamental one as we show here will be found useful. Its size and shape must, in a great measure, depend on the scissors it is intended for; and this can easily be ascertained by tracing round them when they are laid flat down.

Two pieces of cardboard are covered with silk that has been painted or embroidered with some pretty little design; line each with plain silk and bind the edge with narrow ribbon or else work round in buttonhole, forming tiny scallops. Narrow sarcelin ribbon is then sewed to each edge to form a border that separates the two sides.

THE WAY TO ENCOURAGE YOUR HUSBAND WHO IS STRUG-GLING FOR A LIVING.

Do not hesitate to remind him every few days that you have nothing decent to wear—never have had since you were married.

Ask him, every little while, "Why is it we never have anything like other people; never go anywhere?"

Do not fail to tell him now and then that he has been hard up for money ever since you were married.

Do not forget to twit him with the fact that he took you out of a comfortable home and buried you in an obscure, out-of-the-way place, and that he never has time to go anywhere with you.

Do not forget to remind your husband often that your children do not dress as other children do; that the girls should take music lessons from the best teachers, and that they should have a first-class piano and other things to correspond.

Do not encourage your children to wear their clothes a long time; and never try to make them over. When a garment begins to show wear, to get a little out of date, just cast it aside and get a new one. New clothes look so much fresher and smarter than old ones, and one feels so much better in them.

Do not try to economize too much. You know it is the liberal soul that gets fat. Be generous with your husband's money.—Success Magazine.

A Woman's Nature Story.

Mrs. William Holbrook of Harpswell, Me., is the owner of a cat which was whipped by robins, and Mrs. Thomas Welsh of the same town has a cat that "permits deserted chicken to nestle in her fur to keep warm."

Mrs. Holbrook says her cat, called Jim Blaine, tried to catch a young robin on the lawn, and that the parent birds called a score of robins to their assistance. The birds were fighting mad, and two of them chased Jim Blaine into the house. Mrs. Holbrook took the cat and put it out on the porch, and the robins formed a line between the fledglings and the porch and in bird language dared Jim Blaine to come on. Jim refused the call to combat. Mrs. Welsh's cat made friends with the fluffy, cheeping chicks after her kittens had been taken from her. The cat and the chicks have been photographed together.

Wedding Ring Finger.

The idea that the wedding ring should be worn on the third finger of the left hand because "a nerve connects this finger with the heart" is of Roman origin, but, oddly enough, is not continued on the Continent as in England, for in France, Belgium and Germany, and most other European nations, the "engagement ring" finger is the third finger of the left hand while the "wedding ring" finger is the third finger of the right hand.

HE MEANT NOTHING PERSONAL.

This He Made Emphatic When the Tables Turned.

"I don't blame him for lashing you," said the young man with the portrait button in his lapel and the highly embroidered hosier. "Not in a hundred years he couldn't."

"What makes you think so?" asked his chubby companion with the baggage-check watch fob, doubtfully.

"I don't think so. I know it. You'd put it all over him an' I'd bet money on it. You don't need to be scared of him."

"Who said I was scared?" "Nobody. I know you ain't, as far as that goes. I was jest sayin' that you could do him up easy. Say! He's a puddin' for you. He puts up a bluff at bein' a fighter, but that's all it amounts to. He couldn't fight nothin' but booze. He's a great booze fighter, all right."

"I don't know about that. I heard about him jumpin' a guy over on West Madison Street an' beatin' him up so's they had to call an ambulance an' take him to the county hospital."

"Somebody's been givin' you a pipe. If he did, the guy must have been asleep. I seen a little guy not near as big as you are run him out o' Pomeroy's billiard parlor with a cue. He like to took the door frame along with him. I bet if you went up an' slapped him in the face, he'd start to cry."

"I don't believe that." "You don't? You think he'd put up a scrap? Not on your life! It wouldn't do him any good if he did. He's all fat. There ain't no muscle to him. He's just one big stiff, that's all he is."

"I'm fleshy myself." "You? There's sumthin' to you. You ain't skanky, but what there is of you is solid. Lemme feel of your arm. Gee! Say, I'd hate to have you hit me. No, sir! You're solid an' you're quick. You could walk all around him, squat him a cooper around him, sweat him any old place you wanted to. Don't fool away any time on him. Do him up quick. That's your game."

"Who said it was my game?" demanded the pudgy youth. "Who said I was goin' to start in?" "Well, after what he called you I didn't s'pose you was goin' to do anythin' else. I wouldn't let no man say the things about me he did about you an' get away with it."

"I didn't hear him say 'em, an' if I did I don't know as I'd pay any 'tention to him. He's all right when he ain't drinkin'."

"He's a skate an' a deadbeat, an' he's no good, drunk or sober, that's what he is, an' I know him. He thinks jest because he's bigger than some that he can do what he likes wid 'em, an' say what he likes. I know him all right. He's a big stiff an' a big bluffer, an' I've got it in for him good an' hard."

"If you've got it in for him why don't you lick him yourself?" demanded the plump youth. "Go up to him an' slap him in the face. He won't hurt you. He'll cry—nit. I don't want any of it myself, but if you want the excelsior beat out of him there ain't nothin' to stop you doin' it."

"Oh, I ain't got nothin' pers'nal against him myself," said the other young man.

Too Many Risks.

"Yes, Biddleford's Russian scheme was an entire failure."

"What did he go there for?" "To organize an accident insurance company."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

HOME-MADE WIRE STRETCHER.

Cheaper and More Powerful Than Factory-Made Device.

The writer some time ago was compelled to fence a 440-acre farm. He was in McDonald county, Missouri, and as this county has no stock laws a factory stretcher could not be secured without driving to Neosho, Mo., a distance of 20 miles.

A home-made device was finally constructed as shown in the sketch. A clamp was made as shown at D with two pieces of 2 by 4 inch stud, 43 inches long. The six-foot lever, C, was also made of 2 by 4-inch lumber.

The trace chains were fastened to the level and clamp with clevises; the two stay chains were also fastened to the lever with clevises, as shown at A. When using the device the clamp was fastened close up to a post by bolting same over the wire, the lever was then made fast to the next post with the trace chain, as shown on left-hand side of cut, by working the lever back and forward.

A Wire Stretcher.

and placing the hooks of the stay chains in the links of the trace chain B, the wire was soon made tight.

The device was found to be more powerful than the factory stretcher, and if anything quicker, and when we finally secured a stretcher from Neosho it was set to one side and our home-made device used instead.

As the entire outfit was secured on the farm the cost of the same was the time it took to make it, about two hours, the six half-inch bolts for the clamp were taken out of the hay rack.—J. E. Bridgman, Lamar, Mo.

Spraying Experiments.

Experiments with fungicides upon potatoes have been carried on at the Vermont Experiment Station for eighteen years. Experiments made recently were designed particularly to determine the relative gain from spraying potatoes with bordeaux mixture and paris green, comparing the results from two, three and four applications. Two applications of bordeaux mixture made in August proved less efficient in checking the flea beetle and early blight than where other applications were made, particularly the spraying made in early July. The increase in marketable tubers for the sprayed over the unsprayed lots varies from 52 to 172 per cent.

Pump for the Garden.

A good pump should be part of the equipment of every garden. For the small garden a good bucket, compressed air or knapsack pump will be most satisfactory, while for larger gardens a barrel pump, with an attachment for spraying several rows when occasion demands, or an automatic pump geared to the wheels of the truck, will be found more economical of time and labor. The small compressed air sprayer is handy, as it leaves both hands free for use, and is, therefore, useful if it is desired to spray two or three small trees, possibly with the use of a stepladder to reach their tops.

Fertilizers.

Fertilizers may be divided into two general classes—direct and indirect, or nutritive and stimulant. A direct or nutritive fertilizer is one which furnishes nourishment to the growing crop. Nourishment means simply nitrogen, phosphoric acid and potash. These are the three ingredients which must be renewed through the medium of manures and fertilizers. A stimulant or indirect fertilizer is one which does not furnish an actual plant food to the soil, but by its stimulating action renders available some plant food which previously existed in the soil in an insoluble or unavailable condition.

Kerosene Emulsion.

Here is a recipe for kerosene emulsion: Hard soap, half pound; boiling water, 1 gallon; coal oil, 2 gallons. Dissolve the soap in the water, pour in the coal oil and churn or beat together briskly with a paddle for at least ten minutes. Dilute from ten to twenty-five times before applying. Use it strong for scale insects. Kerosene emulsion destroys insects which suck, such as plant lice, red spiders, etc. It will also kill cabbage worms, caterpillars, and all insects with soft bodies.

Not a single apple should go to waste. What cannot be marketed, or used by the family should be gathered and fed to the stock. Rotting fruit left on the ground not only is a dead loss, but it insures a good insect pest crop for next season.

Picking Apples.

A packer declared that the cost of picking a barrel of apples on very large, high trees is 20 cents a barrel, while on low-headed trees the cost does not exceed seven cents.

You cannot do without a good smoker for the small cost of one dollar.

Ever since the resignation of Dr. Stephenson, the matter has been under consideration but no decision has yet been reached. About sixty applications have been received and considered, and several applicants have made trips to Greencastle to interview the authorities personally. This was the hottest day of the week, the thermometer reaching the 100 degree mark at shortly after 1 o'clock. At that time clouds began to gather and the atmosphere greatly cooled off for an hour or more. There was a hard rain east this morning and Tuesday night there was a good rain near Manhattan. Greencastle people are still hoping for a good rainfall and relief from the intense heat.

THE FLORIDA STINGAREE.

A Terror of Fishermen and Bathers That Hides in the Sand.

The stingaree is the terror of the south Florida fishermen who work with their nets in the shallows of bayous and inlets, while the cry of "Stingaree!" will cause more fear among bathers than a rattler could on dry land.

The stingaree is a square shaped member of the ray family, with a head not much to look at on one corner, and on the diagonal corner its weapon, the wickedest kind of tail. The other two corners flap it along with a wavy motion only to be compared to the opening waves of Lolo Fuller's old butterfly dance while she was warming up.

The beast scoops out a hole just deep enough so that when it is in it its back is nearly level with the sandy bottom. As the young are almost sand colored on top they are not easily distinguished. Step on a stingaree and up over its back comes that tail striking like a stiletto. A stab thus inflicted in the foot will continue to burn up along the leg to the hip. Owing to the depth and peculiar shape of the wound it is difficult to cleanse and heal. Fishermen have been laid up for months with such a wound.

Danger from Ferro-Silicon.

Ferro-silicon, which has recently become a necessity in the manufacture of certain high-grade steels, has developed dangers in transportation which have led some steamship companies to refuse to carry it. The substance is a metallic powder formed in an electric furnace by heating a mixture of iron ore, quartz, lime and coke. When moistened it gives off gases, which are not only explosive if confined, but are also dangerous to breathe. Among these is phosphoretted hydrogen, which, when mixed with air in the proportion of 1 part in 5,000, is said to be fatal to small animals. Deaths are alleged to have occurred among the crews of ships exposed to the emanations of this substance. But Mr. G. Watson Gray asserts that the danger can be avoided by careful methods of manufacture. If the silicon content is below 40 or above 60 per cent, the substance is comparatively harmless, but between these proportions it may be dangerous to transport. It should never be confined or hermetically sealed.

Examination Questions.

"When a student does not know the answer to an examination question he does one of three things," said a University of Pennsylvania professor recently. "If he is a good student he will either try to bluff it through or else pass it off as a joke. These latter cases are rare, and the result is generally painful and does harm to the student who wrote the paper. Occasionally, however, there will be a real gem, which does the student good by putting the professor in a good humor and so making him unconsciously mark the paper less severely. I came across two such gems in one paper recently. One question was: 'Who was St. Bruno?' To which the student replied: St. Bruno was a great Dane, a brother of St. Bernard." The other question was: 'What was the difference between the major prophets and the minor prophets?' Here he answered: 'It would not be right for me, a sinner, to make invidious comparisons between such holy men.'

A Girl's Way.

It was a sweltering summer afternoon. Algernon sat in the hammock and Claire occupied a wicker chair. She was very pretty, and Algernon was hopelessly in love with her. He was almost in despair as he sat looking at her playing with his heart, and he knew it.

"Oh, Claire," he pleaded, "why are you so cold?"

"I am not, Algie," she protested.

"You are, Claire," he insisted.

"And I say just as positively that I am not."

"Claire, Claire," he cried, "how can you say that when you know you have treated me like—"

"Oh," she interrupted, fanning herself lazily meanwhile, "I thought you were talking about the weather, Algie."—Lippincott's.

Helium Shows Age of Rocks.

The quantity of helium present is thought by R. J. Strutt to bear a definite relation to the age of radioactive rocks. From the ratio of the helium to the uranium, says the Cleveland Plain Dealer, he has estimated the time necessary to accumulate the former—that is, the age of the stratum. His provisional results show an age of 225,000 years for the English Pliocene, 3,080,000 for the upper green sand of the Cretaceous, 3,950,000 for the lower green sand and 141,000,000 for the hematite covering limestone of the carboniferous.

Blood-Heat.

Blood-heat, the normal temperature of the human body, is about 98 1/2 degrees, Fahrenheit. This is known as blood-heat, and is maintained, with in one or two degrees, whether in the arctic or the tropical regions. Any deviation from the average is injurious, and if it be great or long continued is likely to prove fatal.

To Regulate Stockyard Building.

It is likely that there will be laws in New York and other states requiring that stockyards in the future be constructed of concrete.

Several posts have been placed on the walks at the entrance to the DePauw university campus to prevent joy-riders from using the broad cement walks for a public highway. The posts are of iron and bedded in concrete, so there is no doubt that they will effectually put a stop to further motorizing on the college premises. It was the custom of the motorists to run back and forth through the campus in the wee small hours of the morning, but from now on they will be forced to do their driving on the streets.
